LEMOINE" NATURAL CHAMPAGNE, AWARDED PRIZE MEDAL, PARIS, 1889.

THE Special Features of this Pure Champagne afe:-1st .- Its entire freedom from the usual sugarcandy, ect., consequently, it is fresher, cleaner, and more wholesome than the Liqueured champagnes. and.—Its Delicacy, due to the first pressings only of the grapes used : the later pressings make the wine rough and coarse, and necessitate the use of liqueur. 3rd.—Its Natural Dryness, which is not aggressive, making it more appetiring than satisfying. 4th.-No liqueur bring added, the process of re-corking is very rapidly effected, so avoiding the large loss of carbonic acid gas-the most valuable property of Champagne. Champagne should always be drunk cold; but to half freeze a light, delicate wine by putting it into an ice-pail for the best part of an hour, is to destroy all its fine vinous properties."

In former years, when heavily Liqueured Champagnes were alone obtainable, a good freezing was necessary to hide the nauseous sweetness of a ten per cent. dose of sugar-candy nd alcohol; but consumers now demand a w free from unnatural sweetness or alcohol-a sparkling vintage which can be taken freely at luncheon or dinner, and which will improve, rather than destroy, the appetite.

IT is pretty certain that his Majesty the Emperor Japan has suffered from a very severe attack of influenza. The Fapan Mail states that a rumour to that effect found its way abroad at the time when nearly all the Court Ladies were attacked by the epidemic, but the Imperial ailments are kent wonderfully quiet in that country, and people soon became persuaded that the Sovereign's condition had been falsely represented. Now, however, the vernacular press states very confidently that this Majesty's illness lasted for forty days, and that a high degree of fever was registered at one time. Happily the progressive Emperor is now convalescent.

THE troopship Tyne, with reliefs for the Rattler and Swift, is said to be due here to-morrow. Very little was done, however, towards making good her other defects, and when the vessel returns from her China trip she is likely to be all defects.

CAST-IRON check is undoubtedly a valuable stock-in-trade for the legal business. Here is a little story that is very much to the point, and might easily be applied locally : - Some years ago a young man applied to the District Court of Dallas, Tex., to be examined to practice law. A lawyer was appointed to examine the qualifications of the candidate for admission to the Bar. The young man was rather deficient in Blackstone and Greenleaf. It looked very much as though he lacked the requisite preparation and the examining lawyer badgered him until his brow was beaded with perspiration. "Do you know what fraud is in the judicial sense of the word?" inquired the examining attorney. don't-I hardly think I do," was the stammering "Well, fraud exists when a man takes advantage of his superior knowledge to injure an gnorant person." "So, that's it, is it! Then if you take advantage of your superior knowledge of law to ask me questions I can't answer, owing to my ignorance, and in consequence thereby I am refused a license, I will be injured and you will be found guilty of fraud. Won't you, Judge ?" The lawyer was very thoughtful for a few moments and then added, reflectively "My young friend, I perceive you have great matural qualifications for the Bar, and I shall recommend that a large, handbornely engrossed and richly engraved license be granted you in spite of your ignorance."

ON BAD LIQUOR AND OTHER MATTERS.

The human race drinks a good deal too much and the world's old maiden aunt is harassed thereby. The tectotal cause is vastly stronger than it, was ten years ago, and at the same time the national drink-hill is a great deal larger. The demand for anti-liquor legislation and the demand for liquor keep on growing together. There is a constantly increasing trade in those good little books and snuffle-busting pamphlets, in which Thomas Jones is represented as coming heme to his once happy domicile, and running dmok among the jurditure with ah axe; but they appear to leave no perceptible effect behind them. Yet the attractions of drink, so far as they are visible to any intelligent understanding, are rather diminishing than -increasing. Whisky, as a rule, is partly kerosene and the rest liquid fire, and to the person who meets it for the first time, it resembles nothing so much as a live lobster swallowed with the claws foremost. which is about four feet below read level. ing place in the legal world of the Colony, and Brandy and the rich old wines of Europe labour thereabouts of the amount consumed, and where both factions could lose our satisfaction would the balance comes from no one knows. The vine-clad slopes where most of the world's liquor is produced are situated up three pairs of stairs in a back-slum, and the unwashed cultivator sleeps on top of the vintages, and the mellow sunshine which ripens the harvest is kept in a keg, and the poetry and bright romance of the wine-cup are bought at the chemical factory round the corner. Yet the world hangs on tenaciously to its kerosene and carriage-varnish, and the world's old muiden aunt bangs herself about to very little purpose. Tectotalism is spreading and so is liquor, and it is difficult to say which is spreading the faster.

The fact is that a great deal too much of the religious element is imported into the contest. Tectotalism should take its stand solely on three simple truths-first, that the human inside is not strong enough to endure a .constant swallowing of explosives and combustibles; second, that if the world insists on devouring about twice as much liquor as it can conveniently supply, it must not be surprised when in finds that it is consuming all sorts of substances that are about as wholesome as pounded glass; and third, that in any case the human race can't afford the bill. On these three issues there is room to conduct a square and honourable contest, and the long-tailed coast and holy hymn, which are so extensively imported into the discussion, are merely so much extrancous idiocy, If gin, as compounded nowadays, produces s nefarious action on the liver, the public may be interested in the fact, but the observations on the drink question which Solomon lest behind him have no effect, either when applied internally or subbed on outside. The only tangible result is that one section of the community spends its time in hunting for verses in condemnation of rum and similar fluids, and another section wastes its energies starching Then the question dribbles into all manner of side issues, and presently all chance of an improvement in the quality of "colonial beer is indefinitely postponed on account of a difficulty about the pants of the ancient prophets, or the authenticity of the second episile of Peter, or telerably certain that the men who swear will take PEAK 'HOTEL AND TRADING COMPANY, expanse of shirt-collar and a corporation which | 28th instant, at Noon. text of Scripture sticking obtrusively out of the

The prospect of a world that is filled with hiccups and whose feet, are tied up in a hard knot is eminently offensive, the dream of a world of tectotal drivel and cold tea is, if possible, a shade worse. If drink and tectotalism could be wiped out simultaneously, and the bar and the pious bunstruggle could go together, and the public-house blasphemy and the washy temperance tract were ance lectured and they would go away and make a respectance livelihood in some place where they would never draw public attention any more or rouse any further controversy, then a

If it were possible that be complete, but at least there is gratification in the knowledge that both cannot possibly win. But to the tectotaller who howls for confiscation and ruin, and illustrates his position by tales concerning the holy mission of Joshua; and the necessity of extingating the Amalekites, we can only point out that frenzy, of this kind is out of date, and when a Joshua goes forth to extirpate an Amalekite in these days he is apt to be hanged for his enthusiam. But, so long as this scriptural offlatus is not imported into the contest we can cheerfully stand aside and let matters take their own course. the public demands refreshment for man and beast-and particularly for beast, as he is much the more sumerous of the two-it will probably succeed in obtaining there is a widespread feeling in favour of something more cheering than cold tea the natural law of supply and demand will doubtless meet the emergency. Therefore we presont our whole-souled curse to both combatants --- to the man who compounds bad liquor, and the man who seeks to abolish good-and trust that like the rain it may affect them both alike. If two Chinamen choose to fight it is a matter of small importance to any average white man which Mongol gets on top.
